Introduction

Purpose

This report provides a comprehensive overview of the current humanitarian situation, focusing on both operational environment factors and sectoral analysis. It aims to support informed decision-making for humanitarian partners and stakeholders.

About GANNET

GANNET is a Generative AI Initiative from Data Friendly Space, offering AI-powered tools built to make knowledge and real-time information accessible to our community in a resource-efficient and ethical way. It provides tools such as the GANNET Virtual Assistant and GANNET SituationHub to help humanitarian actors access, analyze, and utilize critical information for their operations.

GANNET SituationHub

The GANNET SituationHub is a generative AI-powered digital public good designed to identify and analyze humanitarian data from thousands of trusted sources in real time. By transforming complex data into clear insights, it enables faster, more effective response strategies and improved coordination among stakeholders.

GANNET Virtual Assistant

The GANNET Virtual Assistant is a verified chatbot designed for humanitarian quick decision-making. Built on cutting-edge Generative AI and trained with humanitarian expert-reviewed data, it provides real-time information. The GANNET Virtual Assistant facilitates rapid data access and synthesis for crisis response.

Methodology Overview

The Situation Hub's analytical process uses a structured Human-in-the-Loop workflow that combines automated analysis retrieval through GANNET Virtual Assistant, DFS's AI-powered humanitarian assistant, with expert review by the DFS analysis team. GANNET automates the extraction and generation of crisis-related insights based on structured prompts, which are aligned with a tailored analytical framework. These outputs are then reviewed, validated, and refined by analysts to ensure accuracy, contextual relevance, and operational utility. The workflow is organized into four key phases: planning and setup, ongoing operations, quality assurance, and system evolution, ensuring a balance between speed and analytical rigor.

Planning, Setup & Quality Control

In the planning phase, analysts develop a contextualized analytical framework, largely based on the Joint Intersectoral Analysis Framework (JIAF), and convert it into structured prompts for AI-assisted data extraction. These prompts are refined over time to improve output quality. Data sources are vetted for reliability, and translations are reviewed for accuracy. Using a centralized Content Management System (CMS), analysts review and curate AI-generated outputs, validate them against external sources, and make refinements to enhance clarity and relevance. The CMS enables collaborative editing and version tracking, ensuring outputs align with humanitarian needs.

Bias Mitigation

To minimize bias, the team diversifies data sources, cross-verifies information, and continuously evaluates the AI's performance. Analysts are crucial in identifying and correcting inaccuracies, especially in automated categorization. Future improvements aim to enhance source credibility checks and sentiment analysis, further strengthening the reliability of the Situation Hub's outputs.

Crisis Overview

The SituationHub landing pages use a standardized yet customizable template to deliver consistent, comprehensive crisis overviews. These pages integrate static content with dynamic data from sources like ACLED and DTM via open APIs, enabling interactive visuals with real-time updates. Regular reviews and verification with in-country partners ensure accuracy, while manual updates are used for sources not connected to APIs.

Media Monitoring

The media monitoring process has evolved from a manual, list-based approach to an AI-assisted system integrated into the CMS. This allows analysts to efficiently review, filter, and contextualize media narratives, while automation helps track emerging trends.

Overview

The following overview has been generated using the information available up to June 29, 2026. It provides a synthesized summary and key insights into the crisis based on the most recent data accessible at that time.

Summary

Myanmar has been in crisis since 1 February 2021, when the military (Tatmadaw) overthrew the democratically elected government. This coup sparked widespread protests and armed resistance, leading to a severe political, economic, and humanitarian crisis. The military regime, known as the State Administration Council (SAC), has responded with brutal force, resulting in thousands of civilian deaths and widespread human rights abuses. As of March 2026, approximately 3.7 million people are internally displaced across the country—a dramatic increase from roughly 300,000 pre-2021—with cross-border displacement projected to rise toward 5.2 million in 2026.

In attempt to seek international legitimacy, the military held general elections in three phases over December 2025 and January 2026 for the first time since the coup. The overwhelming majority of seats were won by the pro-military Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) and saw SAC chairman Min Aung Hlaing elected as president in April 2026. The elections have been widely denounced as neither free nor fair. Despite the transition to a quasi-civilian presidency, armed clashes have continued in multiple parts of the country, including Sagaing, Magway, northern Shan, Kayah, Kayin, Kachin, Chin, and Rakhine. The Arakan Army (AA) now controls all but three of Rakhine State's 17 townships, while resistance forces including the Karen National Liberation Army (KNLA) have consolidated influence across parts of central and southeastern Myanmar. The UN's 2026 Humanitarian Needs and Response Plan (HNRP), released 10 December 2025, projects over 16 million people will require humanitarian assistance this year.

Recovery from the March 2025 earthquake remains slow, with an estimated 3.5 million tonnes of debris and reconstruction hampered by insecurity, shortages of heavy machinery (43%) and labour (40%), and limited access. Many affected communities, particularly in Magway, Sagaing, and Mandalay, continue to live in temporary shelters, while essential services remain disrupted. Approximately 24,200 houses were damaged (24% completely destroyed), and 132 health facilities were damaged—half in Mandalay.

The Rohingya crisis continues to worsen, with the junta's blockade of Rakhine preventing international aid delivery since late 2023, leaving hundreds of thousands of IDPs with severely limited assistance. On 10 December 2025, a military airstrike destroyed Mrauk-U General Hospital, killing at least 33 people and injuring 76–80—one of the deadliest attacks on healthcare in the conflict. Chronic poverty now affects over 80% of the population; the World Bank projects GDP will contract 2.0% in FY2025/26 with inflation remaining above 20%, and market disruptions have deepened food insecurity nationwide. The 2026 HNRP appeals for approximately $890 million but reflects severely constrained funding and narrowed operational space, forcing agencies to prioritize only 2.6 million people with the most severe needs for life-saving support.

Key Insights

1. Myanmar's humanitarian crisis continues to deepen amid persistent conflict, economic collapse, and the lingering impacts of the March 2025 earthquake. An estimated 16 million people—nearly one in three citizens—are projected to require humanitarian assistance in 2026, as conflict-driven displacement, natural disasters, funding shortages, and humanitarian access constraints exacerbate vulnerabilities nationwide.

The 28 March 2025 earthquake remains a defining event in the humanitarian landscape. Official figures from SAC confirm 3,770 deaths and over 5,000 injuries, with the Early Recovery Cluster reporting over 24,200 houses damaged (24% completely destroyed), 4,857 apartments affected, and 132 health facilities damaged. An estimated 3.5 million tonnes of debris blocks roads and markets, with clearance impeded by shortages of heavy machinery (43%) and labour (40%). Nearly three-quarters of the most affected townships continue to face critical shelter and livelihood gaps—64% of communities reported job losses and 30–31% reported damage to crops and workplaces—while disrupted water systems (44% of groundwater sources contaminated) have fueled outbreaks of cholera and dengue.

2. Following the junta-run general elections held over December 2025 and January 2026, as well as ceasefires between the regime and some ethnic armed organizations in northern Shan, the number of armed conflict incidents has gradually decreased. Nonetheless, air and ground offensives continue in the Central Dry Zone, as well as Rakhine, Chin, Kayah, Kayin, and Kachin States. The new government's 100-day roadmap announced on 21 April 2026, which invites resistance groups to enter peace talks and to surrender, have not been widely accepted.

Between January and November 2025, the military conducted 2,165 airstrikes, up from 1,716 in all of 2024. On 10 December 2025, a military airstrike destroyed Mrauk-U General Hospital in Rakhine State, killing at least 33 people and injuring 76–80—prompting UN, WHO, and Amnesty International condemnation and calls for investigation as a possible war crime.

IDPs have reached approximately 3.7 million people as of March 2025, with projections indicating it could rise further through 2026. The AA now controls all but three of Rakhine's 17 townships, while resistance forces have captured extensive border areas in the southeast. Attacks on healthcare are widespread: Insecurity Insight recorded 1,815 attacks on health care between February 2021 and November 2025, with WHO verifying 67 attacks in 2025 alone. Access restrictions, including the junta's blockade of Rakhine since late 2023, continue to endanger civilians—particularly Rohingya communities facing persistent protection risks, restricted mobility, and limited access to aid.

3. Humanitarian access remains severely limited by insecurity and deliberate obstruction. The 2026 HNRP appeals for approximately $890 million but reflects severely constrained funding and narrowed operational space, prioritizing only 2.6 million people with the most severe needs at a cost of $521 million.

Partners reached some 6.3 million people at the end of 2025, but access constraints—including roadblocks, landmines, telecommunications blackouts, and the Rakhine blockade affecting 600,000 IDPs—force reliance on low-profile, community-led delivery modalities. WFP warns that hunger has reached "unacceptable" levels, with over 400,000 young children and mothers surviving on nutrient-deprived diets of plain rice or watery porridge.

4. The Food Security Cluster estimates about 12 million people face moderate-to-severe food insecurity in 2026, driven by conflict, displacement, rising food and fuel prices, reduced market access and supply-chain disruptions. September 2025 analyses reported "Serious" to "Critical" Global Acute Malnutrition in multiple conflict-affected townships, notably in northern Rakhine, Kachin, Sagaing, southern Shan, and Kayah—with nutrition and treatment services suspended or operating at minimal capacity due to access constraints.

Economic conditions continue to deteriorate: the World Bank projects real GDP will contract 2.0% in FY2025/26, with inflation remaining above 20%. Rising poverty and fear of forced conscription have driven male migration, leaving women, girls, and older people as household heads. More than four in ten households identify lack of income as their top challenge, and 83% of internally displaced families can meet half or less of their basic needs. The convergence of conflict, disaster, and economic decline continues to erode coping capacities, pushing Myanmar further toward a protracted humanitarian emergency with no signs of de-escalation.

5. International condemnation has intensified following the 10 December 2025 airstrike on Mrauk-U Hospital. The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights called for an investigation, warning the attack could amount to a war crime. WHO's Director-General condemned the strike as among dozens of verified attacks on healthcare in 2025. Amnesty International and the Burma Human Rights Network have urged the UN Security Council to refer Myanmar to the International Criminal Court, impose an arms embargo, and authorize emergency cross-border humanitarian aid.

Peace negotiations remain effectively stalled: resistance leaders and the National Unity Government publicly rejected Chinese-brokered terms for northern Shan State. The junta cancelled voting in over 67 townships where it cannot secure control, while nationwide "silent strikes" signalled popular rejection of the military's December 2025 elections. EU and Australia have declared the vote "not credible" amid junta repression. The junta denied responsibility for civilian casualties, accusing "terrorists" of being targeted, while humanitarian organizations stated that the pre-election environment has driven further escalation rather than de-escalation.

6. After taking office on 10 April 2026, president Min Aung Hlaing announced a 100-day program inviting resistance groups — both NCA signatories and non-signatories, including People's Defense Force (PDF) units — to enter peace talks by 31 July 2026. However, the Karen National Union (KNU), All Burma Student's Democratic Front (ABSDF), and the Chin National Front (CNF) quickly rejected the offer, with the KNU stating it has no intention of negotiating under frameworks linked to military rule, underscoring the deep erosion of trust between the junta and resistance forces.

Economy

Current Economic Situation

Conflict-driven disruptions and blockades have sharply reduced internal trade and cash circulation, contributing to rising commodity prices and worsening living conditions in western and central areas including Rakhine and Magway [8][4]. Supplies from mainland Myanmar have largely been cut off, with imports from Bangladesh and India only partially preventing critical shortages [8]. The junta has also moved to regain control of key cross-border trade corridors (notably efforts to retake the Kalay–Tamu road) to restore access and revenue from India-border trade routes [24][8]. Rising global prices and regional instability have pushed up fuel costs, adding inflationary pressure to households and markets [18]. Agricultural output remains broadly favourable: dry-season rice planting completed on about 1.1 million hectares (96% of the national plan), with ~750,000 hectares harvested producing 4.16 million tonnes of paddy at ~5.5 t/ha; dry-season maize had 10,000 hectares harvested (64% of plan) with an estimated yield of 5.06 t/ha and projected production of 50,000 tonnes; wet-season maize sowing is also underway. However, forecasts warn of elevated El Niño-related below-normal rainfall risks that could affect production later in 2026 [18][30]. Humanitarian access constraints and funding shortfalls limit assistance to displaced populations, compounding socio-economic hardship and weakening immediate shock-absorption capacity in affected areas [4][13].

Conflict Economic Landscape

Myanmar's economic landscape remains deeply constrained by sustained conflict and large-scale displacement, with 15,371 conflict-related deaths in 2025, more than 3.5 million internally displaced, and over 1.5 million refugees abroad [9]. The junta is advancing large infrastructure and extractive initiatives — including renewed activity on the Yadanabon Cyber City zone, and pledges for the Kaladan Multi-Modal Transit Project and the India–Myanmar–Thailand Trilateral Highway — prompting accelerated land clearances and rising land values [15][8][5]. Lands cleared through systematic village destruction in Rakhine are being repurposed for infrastructure and natural resource extraction projects (pipelines, roads, rail links), bolstering military-controlled revenues, while Rohingya-vacated lands are similarly redirected toward junta-linked commercial interests [5][15]. Recent evictions and project-related land clearance (notably around Pyin Oo Lwin) have displaced traders, tenants and small businesses, undermining local livelihoods while rents and property prices rise [15]. Explosive incidents and insecurity (for example the Namhkam explosives-depot blast) have caused casualties and substantial rebuilding needs for homes and services in affected communities [28]. Returns and reintegration trends are increasing but remain precarious, with UNHCR and global forced displacement reporting noting returns to Myanmar in 2025–26 amid widespread infrastructure damage, limited services, high poverty and fragile livelihood prospects, indicating urgent needs for investment in jobs, basic services and reconstruction [43][51]. Humanitarian and development financing constraints — including large donor funding reductions and reports of unspent allocations — are limiting recovery, reconstruction and service restoration at scale [13]. Ongoing regional diplomacy, including ASEAN ministerial visits such as Indonesia's foreign minister to Naypyidaw on 8 June 2026, may open channels for political and economic re-engagement, but analysts warn such bilateral engagement risks normalising the junta absent tangible progress on peace and implementation of the Five-Point Consensus [10][7].

Stability of Currency and Bank System

Conflict-driven supply disruptions and blockades in Rakhine and other western areas have sharply reduced goods inflows and cash circulation, contributing to rising commodity prices, local liquidity shortages and market dysfunction in conflict-affected areas [8][4]. Rising global prices and regional instability have further pushed up fuel costs, adding inflationary pressure to households and markets [18]. Since early 2026, accelerated land clearance and redevelopment tied to the Yadanabon project and the junta's 100-Day Plan have driven sharp increases in local property prices and rents around Pyin Oo Lwin and elsewhere in Mandalay Region [15].

Employment

Humanitarian and economic disruptions have sharply constrained livelihoods and job opportunities for displaced and other vulnerable populations in Myanmar, with WFP assistance halted and domestic aid declining, undermining survival and income options for many displaced households [1]. Key displacement figures illustrate the scale of livelihood disruption:

- Nationwide, more than 3.7 million people are displaced since the coup; Kachin State had 244,550 IDPs as of 1 June 2026 (an increase of ~12,000 year-on-year) [1].
- Magway Region: over 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships since mid-May 2026; western Bago Region: more than 25,000 displaced since late May 2026 [4].
- Myitche (Magway) crisis: over 19,100 IDPs after operations in May–June 2026, with nearly 40 civilians killed and ~1,000 homes destroyed, severely disrupting local markets and livelihoods [3].

Shrinking cash circulation, rising commodity prices and disrupted supply routes (notably affecting Rakhine) have further reduced market access and income opportunities for civilians in contested areas [8][3]. Attacks on health services have been extensive (1,877 reported attacks on health care 2016–2025), contributing to loss of jobs and heightened risks for health workers and health sector employment continuity [46]. Rohingya communities have been subjected to unlawful conscription and large-scale destruction of villages, removing local livelihoods while vacated land is repurposed for junta-linked infrastructure and resource projects that shift economic opportunities away from affected communities [5].

For Myanmar refugees in Thailand, the transition toward a "right to work" and economic inclusion is advancing but remains constrained by documentation barriers, mobility limits, limited employer engagement, skills gaps and protection needs; recommended measures include demand-driven job matching, training, labour protection monitoring, language support and strengthened employer engagement to enable sustainable employment pathways [32][11].

Politics

Governance Structures and Rule of Law

The junta's National Solidarity and Peacemaking Negotiation Committee (NSPNC) met on 4 June to consider a Tai-Leng Nationalities Development Party (TNDP) proposal to create a Shanni self-administered region encompassing Homalin, Hkamti, Kale and Tamu townships, a move publicly opposed by the United Kuki State Council in a 7 June statement that cited historical injustices including a 1967 military campaign that burned over 40 Kuki villages and displaced more than 20,000 people [105]. Nationwide displacement and constrained service delivery continue to undermine governance: Myanmar had about 3.6 million internally displaced persons at end-2025, with Sagaing Region recording over 1 million displaced and Kachin State displacement rising, while domestic aid is declining and some international assistance, including a WFP halt, has reduced humanitarian capacity [89][106]. The ASEAN Five-Point Consensus (5PC) — cessation of violence, constructive dialogue, designation of an ASEAN special envoy, humanitarian assistance and envoy visits — continues to frame regional diplomacy and is invoked by stakeholders advocating for people-centred political roadmaps [83]. ASEAN engagement remains active but contested, with analysts warning that bilateral visits by member envoys risk being perceived as legitimising the military leadership if not tied to measurable progress on cessation of violence and accountability [69]. Regional information flows and research on Myanmar face constraints tied to broader security dynamics, exemplified by the detention in China on 3 June of the Executive Director of the Institute for Strategy and Policy Myanmar (ISP-M), highlighting limits on cross-border research and transparency [99].

Political Freedoms and Recent Laws

Since early June 2026, ASEAN engagement and domestic repression have continued following the disputed December 2025–January 2026 electoral process that led to Min Aung Hlaing being appointed president in April 2026 [69][96]. Human rights observers have widely criticised the polls as a "sham," and Amnesty International researchers and other monitors interpreted recent releases as reputation management rather than signs of substantive reform [69][96]. The Assistance Association for Political Prisoners (AAPP) estimated about 22,064 pro-democracy activists and civilians remained detained even after an amnesty that freed roughly 4,000 people and saw Aung San Suu Kyi's sentence reduced and her allegedly moved to house arrest [96]. Since the 2021 coup, more than 30,000 political prisoners have been held, including over 6,400 women, according to the AAPP, and the UN has identified significant evidence of systematic torture, killings and sexual and gender-based crimes in Myanmar's prisons [96]. Intensified military operations have driven protection crises: Pakokku and Saw townships in Magway Region recorded more than 44,000 people displaced since mid-May 2026, western Bago Region over 25,000 displaced, and airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes [87]. Overall reporting documents patterns of selective law application, ongoing arbitrary arrests and large-scale detentions that continue to constrain freedoms of expression, assembly and association in Myanmar [96][83].

Influence of Non-State Actors and Political Factions

Fortify Rights reported and documented a mass killing from an airstrike and subsequent shooting in Yaetwinkone village (Kyaukkyi township) on 5 March that killed 28 civilians and attributed the raid to units under Light Infantry Division 77, naming Light Infantry Battalions 20 and 439 and Infantry Battalion 264, and called on UN member states to act against the junta's impunity [119]. A regional civil society letter covering November 2025–April 2026 reported 411 armed clashes and 288 deaths in that period, including 136 airstrikes across 12 townships, and described Rakhine as a warzone where junta forces and the Arakan Army (AA) continue major combat operations [86]. Monitoring by Insecurity Insight shows a sharp rise in state-driven attacks on healthcare from 2021 onward, noting that state forces have used airstrikes, arrests and hospital raids against health facilities [60]. Reporting around early June 2026 attributed a deadly explosives-depot accidental blast in Namhkam to both the Ta'ang National Liberation Army (TNLA) and Chinese-linked supply routes; the TNLA provided 10 million MMK per family in compensation, leaders attended local ceremonies on 6 June, and more than 70 injured remained hospitalised as recovery and rebuilding challenges continued [109]. Chinese authorities detained ISP-Myanmar founder Min Zin at Kunming airport on 3 June on suspicion of espionage; reporting noted ISP-M's research on China's influence in Myanmar borderlands and commentary that Beijing has intermittently backed both the military and non-state armed factions to suit its interests [99][101]. ASEAN envoys — including Philippines Special Envoy Ma. Theresa Lazaro and recent visits by Indonesian, Thai and Malaysian officials — have sought meetings with ethnic armed organisations and the junta to advance the 5PC [83][69].

Public Trust in State Institutions

Activists report that recent prisoner releases and parliamentary changes are viewed by many as token measures and have not restored public confidence in state institutions [96]. Regional diplomacy has also affected perceptions: analysts warn that bilateral engagement by individual ASEAN members — including recent envoy visits — risks being seen as conferring legitimacy on the military leadership unless paired with tangible progress on the ground, a dynamic that could further erode domestic and regional trust in Myanmar's institutions and ASEAN's credibility [69][75]. Civil society and humanitarian coordination for people displaced from Myanmar remain active: the Committee for Coordination of Services to Displaced Persons in Thailand (CCSDPT) comprises 13 member organisations and multiple sectoral working groups, and coordinates with Thailand's Ministry of Interior and National Security Council to support displaced Myanmar communities, reflecting sustained NGO activity despite political constraints [85].

Role of Marginalized Groups

ASEAN Special Envoy Ma. Theresa Lazaro said she intends to meet Myanmar ethnic armed groups to learn the situation and seek solutions, a step praised by ASEAN Parliamentarians for Human Rights as potentially enabling more inclusive dialogue under the Five-Point Consensus [83]. Regional civil society coalitions and rights groups have publicly demanded legal recognition and protections for the Rohingya, urged ASEAN to abandon strict non-interference, and called on states — including Malaysia — to adopt legal frameworks such as ratifying the 1951 Refugee Convention to protect refugees [86][98]. Documented patterns of repression since the 2021 coup include torture, sexual abuse, and deaths of female detainees in custody, with over 6,400 women among those imprisoned [96]. Civil society space for analysts and exile think tanks is constrained regionally, as illustrated by the detention of ISP-Myanmar founder Min Zin by Chinese authorities on 3 June, highlighting transnational pressures on researchers and independent voices [99][101][125][126]. Media development actors working with exiled Myanmar journalists report criminalisation, systematic suppression and funding challenges that limit marginalised and exile actors' participation in public information and accountability processes [78].

Security And Stability

Security Overview

Displacement continues to rise across Myanmar: more than 44,000 people were displaced in Magway Region's Pakokku and Saw townships since midMay, and over 25,000 were displaced in western Bago Region since late May, while airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes across multiple villages; humanitarian response remains limited due to access constraints and funding shortfalls [163]. Junta airstrikes have also hit a hospital and IDP camps in Kachin and Karenni States, killing three civilians amid ongoing heavy fighting and displacement in those areas [171]. Fortify Rights announced on 9 June that its investigation confirmed a mass killing from an airstrike and shootings in Yaetwinkone village (Bago Region) on 5 March that killed 28 civilians, including children and a pregnant woman, and identified involvement by Light Infantry Division 77 units (LIB 20, LIB 439) and Infantry Battalion 264 [150][164]. The organisation further stated the monastery bombing and detention of civilians may amount to war crimes and called on UN member states to pursue accountability and increased action against the junta [164][150].

Security Forces and Law Enforcement

Since May 2026, the junta has deployed thousands of troops to Magway Region—including major deployments to Saw and Mindon townships and reinforcements of over a thousand troops in Mindon—aiming to disrupt resistance supply routes and triggering intense clashes, repeated airstrikes, and destruction of villages [133]. The military now controls roughly 21% of the country amid a civil war that international monitors estimate has caused over 96,000 deaths and displaced some 3.6 million people [131]. China and Russia continue to supply arms to the military, sustaining its operational capacity [139][143]. The junta and some ethnic armed groups are financed in part through an expanding illicit drug economy—estimated to have risen to about US$35 billion by 2024—which sustains armed actors and complicates interdiction efforts [127]. Human rights organisations, UN-linked reporting, and NGOs document systematic rights abuses by junta security forces, including torture and deaths in detention, widespread sexual violence used as a tool of intimidation, and attacks on health facilities and civilians that may constitute war crimes [152][129][136][150]. Judicial and policing processes display limited transparency in high-profile cases, with authorities frequently refusing to release information and restricting access to court proceedings [141].

Demography

Demographic Overview

More than 3.5–3.7 million people are internally displaced in Myanmar, with Sagaing Region alone accounting for over 1 million displaced, while over 1.5 million people have sought refuge abroad, primarily in Bangladesh, Malaysia and Thailand [184][192]. According to UNHCR's Global Trends 2025, an estimated 225,200 stateless Rohingya were internally displaced within Myanmar and 519,600 stateless people were reported in the country, while roughly 1.2 million Rohingya remained in Bangladesh at end2025 [182].

In Kachin State, UNHCR–Myanmar recorded 244,550 people displaced as of 1 June 2026, equivalent to nearly 15% of the state's approximately 1.6 million population and about 12,000 higher than the previous year, while data up to December 2025 shows more than 70,000 previously displaced people had returned home [192]. In Magway Region, more than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships since midMay 2026 [185]. The Myitche crisis (10 May–5 June 2026) produced over 19,100 IDPs, with nearly 40 civilians killed and approximately 1,000 homes destroyed [186]. Repeated airstrikes and fighting around Mindat township forced more than 17,000 residents to flee [195].

Socio-Cultural

Socio-Cultural Overview

Myanmar's conflict involves a large and fragmented set of ethnic armed organisations and resistance groups, including the ABSDF, ALP, CNF, DKBA, KNU, KNU/KNLA-PC, PNLO, RCSS, NMSP, LDU, KIA, NDAA, MNDAA, SSPP/SSA, TNLA, AA, UWSA, ARSA, KNPP and numerous PDFs, shaping local identities, loyalties and dispute lines across states and regions [221]. Key displacement figures in early June 2026 include more than 3.6 million IDPs nationwide as of end-2025/early-2026 [235], with over 19,100 IDPs in Myitche (Magway) after raids beginning 10 May — during which nearly 40 civilians were killed and approximately 1,000 homes burned [224], over 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway) since mid-May amid continuing military operations and airstrikes [227], and more than 17,000 residents displaced in Mindat (southern Chin State) following repeated airstrikes and attacks [225].

These operations have included summary killings, widespread village burnings and deliberate attacks on civilian infrastructure; religious sites have also been struck amid allegations that some attacks may amount to war crimes, contributing to deep mistrust between communities and the junta [224][232]. The Rohingya remain a distinct, stateless minority subjected to mass displacement and persecution, with around 1.2 million living in Cox's Bazar camps in Bangladesh; ongoing allegations of systemic abuses and forced returns continue to shape intercommunal tensions and regional humanitarian burdens [236][243]. Digital narratives and social media are actively shaping local perceptions of services and actors – undermining trust in healthcare and humanitarian actors, contributing to the criminalisation of health services in some communities, and increasing risks to health workers and facilities, which erodes social cohesion and acceptance of civilian services [251]. Regional diplomatic moves are affecting social-political dynamics: Indonesia's foreign minister visited Naypyidaw on 8 June 2026 as ASEAN members recalibrate engagement with the junta, and the Philippines' foreign minister – appointed ASEAN special envoy – has indicated plans to meet ethnic armed groups to widen dialogue beyond junta-centric channels, which may influence local perceptions of legitimacy and prospects for inclusive talks [256][239][237][240].

Gender Dynamics

Reports document widespread and systematic sexual and gender-based crimes in Myanmar, with investigators noting persistent impunity for these violations [221][245]. Over 900 documented cases of conflict-related sexual violence against Rohingya were recorded between February 2021 and May 2025 [243]. Legal Action Worldwide (LAW) and related investigations concluded that documented acts – including rape, torture, and political and gender-based persecution – constitute crimes against humanity and war crimes in the post-coup context [221]. The AAPP reports that more than 6,400 women are among over 30,000 political prisoners detained since the 2021 coup, with multiple accounts of sexual abuse and torture in detention [245]. Gender-based violence risks remain elevated among displaced Myanmar populations and in host settings, while gender-based violence (GBV) prevention and response services face reduced coverage due to access and funding constraints [234]. Civil society and women's rights networks – including Rohingya Women's Network members who work with UNHCR – continue to document abuses and advocate for accountability and protection measures [245][243].

Impact of Socio-Cultural Drivers on Aid

Myanmar accounts for the largest number of recorded incidents and arrests of health workers over the past decade, particularly following the February 2021 military coup, with one mass series of arrests in Yangon involving more than 200 health workers [251]. Arrests were often carried out during raids on health facilities, at checkpoints, or at workers' homes, and detainees are overwhelmingly national health workers [251]. With 1,877 incidents recorded in one dataset, Myanmar accounts for a leading share of attacks on healthcare globally, exacerbating risks to women's access to health services and to health workers of all genders [251]. Independent media and civil society actors face criminalisation, systematic suppression and an extensive exile context, constraining local information channels and limiting direct donor engagement with grassroots actors [248]. Rohingya refugees continue to face escalating hate and discrimination in host countries, with civil society in Malaysia warning of growing normalisation of hate speech and calling for protection and accountability [262]. UNHCR reported that Myanmar was among the six countries receiving the largest number of returns in 2025, alongside the DRC, Sudan, Syria, Afghanistan and Ukraine [263]. Analysts have cautioned that bilateral or unilateral ASEAN engagement risks being perceived as legitimising Myanmar's military leadership unless accompanied by tangible progress on the ground, a perception that could undermine regional coherence and complicate coordinated humanitarian approaches [256].

Environment

Environmental Conditions

Parts of the Mekong sub-region, including Myanmar, experienced severe transboundary haze from land and forest fires, with impacts peaking in March 2026 and posing elevated health risks for children, the elderly, and people with chronic conditions [278]. Fires also degrade land capacity to absorb heavy rainfall, linking increased fire incidence to higher flood risk when rains return in the region [278]. The Mekong sub-region's substantial reliance on hydropower – which includes Myanmar – raises transboundary water-governance and sustainability concerns that can amplify environmental and livelihood risks when rainfall and river flows are volatile [295]. On the coast, mangrove extent and closed-canopy mangroves in Myanmar have grown since the 2010s, aided by post-Cyclone Nargis shifts in policy and a national logging ban enacted in 2016, enhancing coastal resilience, carbon sequestration capacity, and protection against storm surge and erosion [303][307]. Regional public health risks linked to environmental factors – including increased contamination and foodborne disease risks exacerbated by climate change – further heighten vulnerability across Southeast Asia, with implications for Myanmar's population and food systems [290].

Environmental Challenges

Myanmar is highly vulnerable to the developing 2026–27 El Niño. GEOGLAM/NOAA outlooks forecast a rapid El Niño onset (82% chance May–July 2026) and a high likelihood of a moderate-to-strong event by late 2026 into early 2027, with a ca. 65% chance of strong to very strong conditions in October–December 2026 and a possible positive Indian Ocean Dipole reinforcing regional drying [284][294][298]. Short disruptions to rainfall and cropping tied to El Niño can devastate largely rain-dependent farming – up to 85% of farmland regionally is dependent on rainfall – increasing the likelihood of drought, fires, and erratic rainfall across the Mekong sub-region [284][294]. In response, World Vision reported that in 2025 it trained tens of thousands of farmers across countries including Myanmar on climate-smart agriculture and water management practices to build resilience to such shocks [284]. Displacement-related environmental pressures also affect WASH and waste systems: community-based waste management in Mae La camp in Thailand processes over five metric tons of solid household waste daily, but systems face financial strain, ageing infrastructure, and increased pressures from consolidation and relocations, with capacity-building and planned service handover activities through 2026–March 2027 [293].

Environmental Risks and Mitigation

Seasonal and subseasonal forecasts issued in late May–June 2026 indicate below-average June rainfall in central Myanmar and likely below-normal June–August rainfall in parts of the south, creating heightened drying and short-term drought risk, while models project much hotter-than-normal temperatures across Myanmar through December 2026, increasing heat stress and evapotranspiration pressures on water supplies and crops [298][294]. Despite those risks, May 2026 agricultural reporting showed slightly above-normal pre-monsoon rainfall in key producing areas that supported dry-season rice planting (planting complete on about 1.1 million ha) and a reported paddy harvest of about 4.16 million tonnes to date, indicating heterogeneous local conditions [283]. Past disaster impacts underline compound risks: the March 2025 earthquake and associated floods and storms triggered large disaster displacements in Myanmar (reported 405,600 new disaster displacements in 2025), and the country had an estimated 3.6 million IDPs at end-2025, illustrating how environmental hazards interact with conflict to drive humanitarian need [311]. Adaptation and sustainable aid measures being promoted in the region include climate-smart agriculture, farmer training, community rainwater harvesting, micro-irrigation, and scaling renewable energy (notably solar) to reduce livelihoods' vulnerability to fuel shocks [284][278]. At the regional level, ASEAN-oriented mitigation priorities stressed in 2026 include improved land management, fire monitoring and firefighting capacity, and implementation of transboundary haze prevention frameworks to reduce fire risk and downstream flood vulnerability [278].

Conflict

Overview of the Ongoing Armed Conflict

Since May 2026, fighting has intensified across western and northern Myanmar, with major active fronts in Magway (Saw, Mindon, Pakokku), southern Chin and the corridor into Rakhine, as well as sustained clashes in Kachin, northern Shan and Karenni states [342][357][346][360]. The junta has deployed large troop columns—reported in some areas as numbering from hundreds to over a thousand—and conducted airstrikes and bombardments aimed at severing resistance supply routes and contesting key towns such as Mindat, Matupi and Paletwa, while clashes and strikes were reported along routes between Shwegu and Ngar Oe [342][360].

Displacement and civilian impact have surged significantly. More than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships since mid-May, over 25,000 displaced in western Bago since late May, and UNHCR-Myanmar reported approximately 244,550 people displaced in Kachin State as of 1 June 2026, with daily clashes in Waingmaw, Bhamo and Hpakant and evacuation notices issued for Shwegu on 8 June [338][357]. Air operations and bombardment between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes across multiple villages in western Bago, and separate junta airstrikes struck a hospital and IDP camps in Kachin and Karenni States, killing at least three people and damaging civilian shelters and a village church [338][360]. An attack on Myitche beginning 10 May forced over 19,100 IDPs, killed nearly 40 civilians (10 May–5 June), and destroyed approximately 1,000 homes across 18 villages [373].

A massive explosives-depot accidental blast in Namhkam township, northern Shan State on 31 May caused dozens of deaths—the TNLA reported 43 killed and 112 injured while local rescue teams reported more than 60 killed—, left many homeless, and drew local allegations of large munitions stockpiles and possible Chinese involvement in the supply or presence of Chinese nationals at the site [346]. Armed group presence and weapons proliferation are evident across the theatre, with the Chin Brotherhood Alliance, Arakan Army, Kachin Independence Army and multiple People's Defence Force units controlling or contesting territory; resistance analysts report stockpiled munitions and efforts to disrupt logistics, and incidents involving large explosive stores have amplified protection risks for civilians in populated areas [342][357][346]. Humanitarian access remains constrained by ongoing hostilities and funding shortfalls, limiting response capacity to the rising displacement and protection needs across affected areas [338].

Conflict Stakeholders

The primary state actor is the Myanmar military junta (Tatmadaw) which is estimated to control roughly 21% of the country amid continued civil war dynamics [350]. The broader human toll of the conflict is severe, with international monitors reporting more than 96,000 killed and at least 3.6 million internally displaced in Myanmar during the ongoing civil war [350][339].

Non-state and anti-junta actors include the National Unity Government (NUG) and its People's Defence Force (PDF) units, as well as multiple ethnic armed organisations such as the Karen National Liberation Army (KNLA)/Karen National Union (KNU), Chin resistance formations (Chin People's Union/Chin People's Army and Chin Brotherhood/Chin National Front), and the Arakan Army (AA), all of which hold and contest significant territory [364][374][342][366]. Since mid-May, the junta has intensified offensive operations—combining airstrikes, bombing runs, and large ground deployments—to retake western and central fronts including Magway, Mindat/southern Chin, Myitche and parts of Bago, with reports of more than 2,000 troops deployed around Mindat and repeated aerial bombardment of population centres [342][374][364].

International advocacy groups such as Fortify Rights have publicly characterised junta strikes on civilian sites—including a Bago monastery—as potential war crimes, and have called on UN member states to support accountability measures and provide political, economic and material assistance to the NUG and resistance administrations [364][366]. External diplomatic engagement is also rising: ASEAN members have begun re-engagement with Naypyidaw, including an official Indonesian foreign minister visit on 8 June 2026 and planned outreach by the Philippines' ASEAN special envoy to meet ethnic armed groups, reflecting a regional recalibration toward inclusive dialogue [329][330][362][333].

Peace Negotiations

ASEAN's 5PC remains the official framework for regional diplomacy on Myanmar, though progress against its conditions has been scant and member states are reassessing engagement tactics rather than pursuing sustained isolation [330][329].

Indonesia's foreign minister visited Naypyidaw on 8 June—described as a "pragmatic recalibration"—where he met president Min Aung Hlaing in a reportedly "cordial, positive" atmosphere, signalling renewed bilateral engagement by some ASEAN members with the junta and conveying Jakarta's support for an inclusive peace process under the 5PC [329][330]. The Philippines, as ASEAN chair in 2026, has designated Foreign Affairs Secretary Ma. Theresa Lazaro as ASEAN special envoy; she has indicated plans to meet ethnic armed organisations and resistance groups to widen dialogue beyond junta-centric channels [333]. ASEAN diplomatic channels remain active, including an agreed virtual meeting with Myanmar's counterparts announced in May, but these contacts have not yet translated into substantive settlement or clear implementation of the 5PC on the ground [329][330].

Analysts, parliamentarians and civil society warn that bilateral engagement risks legitimising the junta and could undermine ASEAN cohesion unless tied to tangible advances on cessation of violence, inclusive dialogue and humanitarian access [329][330]. The December 2025–January 2026 elections and Min Aung Hlaing's installation as president in April 2026 have intensified debate within the region over reintegration versus continued pressure, further complicating mediation prospects [329].

Conflict Outlook

Militarily, the junta has concentrated forces in Magway and intensified operations in southern Chin State—including repeated airstrikes around Mindat—as it seeks to regain territory and secure key transport and supply corridors, while resistance groups continue to hold large swathes of western Myanmar, increasing the likelihood of further offensives [342][374]. These operations have already driven significant displacement, with more than 17,000 residents from Mindat and nearby villages fleeing to forests and other areas, and Rakhine State reporting sharply reduced supplies from mainland Myanmar with rising prices and worsening living conditions [374][342].

On the diplomatic front, concurrent external engagement—including India's infrastructure pledges and potential diplomatic openings with ASEAN and China—may strengthen the junta's political standing or create incentives for further military action, complicating prospects for a negotiated settlement [342][380]. Analysts caution that bilateral engagement by ASEAN members, if not tied to verifiable progress on ceasefire and inclusive talks, risks exposing divisions within the bloc and further legitimising the junta [330][329]. Absent coordinated regional pressure and concrete incentives for ceasefires and inclusive negotiations, the outlook is for continued or intensified hostilities in western Myanmar, with further displacement and worsening humanitarian conditions in the months ahead [330][329][342][374].

Displacement

Displacement Overview

Displacement continues to rise across Myanmar amid ongoing military operations and airstrikes. Since mid-May 2026, more than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway Region), and intensified operations since late May displaced over 25,000 in western Bago, with airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killing nine civilians and destroying homes [418]. In southern Chin State, the offensive around Mindat has forced over 17,000 residents from the town and surrounding villages into forests, neighbouring communities and bunkers [423]. Clashes and daily fighting in Waingmaw, Bhamo and Hpakant, and evacuation orders affecting Shwegu township (notified on 8 June), are driving further displacement in Kachin State [416]. UNHCR-Myanmar reported 244,550 displaced people in Kachin State as of 1 June 2026, an increase of around 12,000 compared with June 2025; displacement in Kachin is protracted — nearly 15 years since renewed fighting began in 2011 [416]. Nationwide, more than 3.7 million people have been displaced since the 2021 coup, with Sagaing Region recording the highest figure at over 1 million [416]. According to UNHCR, Myanmar was among six countries receiving large numbers of returns in 2025, with 415,200 returnees reported that year; UNHCR warned many returns occurred under pressure and into areas with insecurity, damaged infrastructure and limited services [392]. In Kachin, over 70,000 previously displaced people had returned by December 2025, but many returned due to aid suspension, poor living conditions and camp closures rather than improved security, creating risks of secondary displacement [416].

Living Conditions of the Displaced Population

Living conditions for displaced populations across Myanmar are dire and deteriorating. In southern Chin State, the offensive around Mindat has forced over 17,000 residents into forests, neighbouring communities and bunkers, with displaced households reporting rising living costs, food shortages and disrupted farming and market access [423]. Clashes and daily fighting in Waingmaw, Bhamo and Hpakant, alongside evacuation orders affecting Shwegu township (notified on 8 June), continue to displace additional populations in Kachin State, where nearly 244,550 people were already displaced as of 1 June 2026 [416]. Humanitarian response across the country is severely constrained by access limitations and funding shortfalls; partners report limited assistance, WFP has halted operations in some areas and domestic aid is declining, leaving large numbers of displaced people without adequate support [418][416].

Drivers of Displacement

The primary driver of displacement in Myanmar is armed conflict. Intensified military operations and airstrikes since mid-May to early June 2026 have driven new large-scale displacement across multiple regions [418]. Cumulatively, conflict has produced over 3.5 million IDPs and more than 1.5 million people who have sought refuge abroad [391]. Targeted persecution and systematic destruction have compounded displacement, including documented attacks on Rohingya villages, widespread village clearance facilitating military economic projects, at least 136 airstrikes that destroyed hospitals, markets and homes, and over 900 documented cases of conflict-related sexual violence — driving ethnic-based displacement and longstanding statelessness among Rohingya communities [409][411]. Structural drivers sustaining the conflict include illicit economies and armed-group financing, notably a sharp expansion of Myanmar's drug economy that has increased revenue flows to ethnic armed organisations and the junta [405]. Natural disasters have also contributed: the March 2025 earthquake plus floods and storms triggered approximately 405,600 new displacements in 2025, with roughly 281,000 people remaining displaced at year end [389]. Returns and secondary displacement remain significant and precarious: UN reporting recorded approximately 415,200 returns to Myanmar in 2025 amid ongoing insecurity, while in Kachin many returns were driven by aid suspension, poor living conditions and camp closures rather than genuine improvements in safety, complicating sustainable reintegration [404][416]. Displaced households in areas such as Mindat (southern Chin State) report rising living costs, food shortages and disrupted farming and market access as secondary consequences of displacement [423].

Integration

Integration prospects for displaced populations both inside Myanmar and in neighbouring countries remain deeply constrained. Humanitarian support gaps are widening as WFP has halted assistance in some areas and domestic aid is declining, making survival increasingly difficult and limiting the conditions necessary for durable solutions [416][418]. UNHCR warned that returnees to Myanmar in 2025 faced limited access to basic services, reconstruction needs and unemployment, undermining meaningful reintegration [398][392]. In neighbouring Thailand, a government-led, time-bound transition is being advanced to adapt long-standing temporary shelters and expand displaced Myanmar persons' access to legal employment, national services and education through measures such as Thai-language instruction, curriculum alignment, bridging programmes and vocational pathways [400]. In Bangladesh, the continued hosting of Rohingya populations strains local resources, and international funding reductions have increased the need for investments in infrastructure, livelihoods and services to preserve social cohesion [426].

Humanitarian Access

Humanitarian Access Overview

Humanitarian operations in Myanmar face severe and compounding constraints. OCHA reported that displacement continued to rise in early June 2026, with more than 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway Region) since mid-May and over 25,000 displaced in western Bago Region since late May; airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes across multiple villages [469]. Data compiled by ACLED showed 15,371 conflict-related deaths in Myanmar in 2025 and estimated more than 3.5 million IDPs and over 1.5 million refugees abroad, pressures that significantly affect operational reach and access planning [468]. UN reporting and LAW documented widespread abuses, including sexual violence and torture by security forces and non-state actors, which increase protection risks for civilians, impede survivors' access to services and justice, and complicate humanitarian operations in affected areas [468]. The International Rescue Committee (IRC) noted logistics and supply-chain disruptions have reduced deliveries of medicines to Sittwe, Rakhine State and forced agencies to reduce travel to project sites, constraining last-mile engagement with affected communities; rising global logistics costs and reduced air-freight capacity further delay shipments and raise operational expenses [453]. Myanmar is listed on the IRC's 2026 Emergency Watchlist as a country at high risk of worsening humanitarian emergency, indicating elevated needs and constrained response capacity [453]. UN agencies, international NGOs (including IRC), and national and local partners are the principal actors engaged in response, while cross-border sheltering and transition efforts for Myanmar refugees involve the Royal Thai Government alongside UN and NGO partners in Thailand [447][453].

Barriers to Humanitarian Access

Armed conflict, airstrikes, and deliberate attacks on civilian infrastructure constitute the most direct barriers to humanitarian access. Between November 2025 and April 2026 there were 411 armed clashes and attacks that killed 288 people and included 136 airstrikes across 12 townships that destroyed hospitals, markets, and displacement sites, degrading civilians' access to services [448]. In Magway's Myitche area, local aid workers reported more than 19,100 IDPs after junta raids beginning 10 May, with nearly 40 civilians killed and approximately 1,000 homes destroyed, leaving overcrowded camps facing critical food, water, and medical shortages [452]. Frontline operations in Chin State saw Thantlang heavily shelled and largely burned, leaving most residents displaced and complicating access for responders [489]. Magway Region has also emerged as a key junta front as forces concentrate on securing gateways and supply corridors into Rakhine, increasing operational constraints and risk to aid convoys trying to reach western areas [491]. Attacks on healthcare have been pervasive: monitoring shows Myanmar accounts for the largest number of recorded incidents and arrests of health workers since the 2021 coup, with health facilities and staff frequently targeted and detained, undermining the health sector's ability to deliver services [435]. Nationwide, more than 3.7 million people have been displaced since the 2021 coup, with Sagaing Region recording over 1 million displaced; the WFP has halted assistance in parts of the country and domestic aid is declining, constraining survival prospects [451]. UNHCR-Myanmar reported 244,550 people displaced in Kachin State as of 1 June 2026, with daily clashes, evacuation orders (Shwegu on 8 June), and returns driven by aid suspension and poor living conditions rather than improved security [451]. At the diplomatic level, Indonesia's foreign minister visited Naypyidaw on 8 June 2026, a move analysts warned could risk legitimising the military junta and complicate advocacy for restored rights and unfettered humanitarian access [475].

Humanitarian Access Gaps

Certain regions and population groups face the most acute gaps in humanitarian coverage. Kachin State ranks among the highest in displaced numbers, with 244,550 displaced as of 1 June 2026, while Sagaing Region records the highest figure nationally at over 1 million [451]. Funding shortfalls and access constraints have left humanitarian response severely limited across these areas, with the WFP having halted assistance in parts of Kachin and domestic aid continuing to decline [451]. Ethnic and administrative disputes—such as opposition by the United Kuki State Council to proposed boundary changes in northern Sagaing—add localised access risks by heightening tensions and potentially closing contested areas to aid actors [480]. ASEAN diplomatic engagement is ongoing: the Philippine foreign minister has signalled plans to meet ethnic armed groups as ASEAN special envoy, which may influence access dynamics if it leads to negotiated humanitarian channels or, conversely, to shifts in frontlines and control that further restrict delivery [484][485].

Information, Communication and AAP

Information Landscape

Humanitarian information on Myanmar is heavily dependent on local and open source reporting. Local displacement committees, community volunteers, and local aid workers are the primary sources for on-the-ground data, with the Mindat Township Displaced Persons Management Committee reporting more than 17,000 people displaced from Mindat town and surrounding villages [530], and local aid volunteers reporting over 19,100 IDPs in Myitche (Magway Region), nearly 40 civilians killed between 10 May and 5 June 2026, and roughly 1,000 houses burned across affected villages [542]. Local and social media sources – including military-linked Telegram channels – are used to share incident reports and imagery, which both supplements and complicates verification efforts [530][542]. Official transparency is limited: authorities frequently withhold information from the press and access to judicial proceedings is highly restricted, constraining access to authoritative government data [522]. Monitoring and reporting reliability are further weakened by declining humanitarian access and shrinking aid operations – WFP has halted assistance and domestic aid is falling – while open source monitoring can diverge markedly from institutional reporting when access is constrained, complicating validation and coverage [526][497].

Communication Channels

The main channels of information exchange include social media and messaging platforms (notably Telegram), open source digital reporting, community-based structures such as Community Information Teams (CITs), Information Sharing Centres (ISCs) and camp committees, mobile outreach and IEC materials, and local health workers who function as key eyewitness reporters [497][495][530]. Access and reliability of mobile and digital networks are uneven across Myanmar – health workers and relatively connected communities have greater access, while many conflict-affected areas remain cut off, reducing institutional reporting coverage and field presence [497][504]. Digital platforms and open source monitoring provide faster reporting and fill gaps left by restricted institutional channels, but they also amplify misinformation and narratives that can criminalise aid or question the civilian character of services [497]. Community meetings and refugee camp information structures support two-way communication and outreach, including coordinated messaging and mobile outreach for Myanmar refugees in Thailand, yet active fighting, access constraints, and funding shortfalls limit in-person reach and consistent service delivery in affected townships in Myanmar [495][520][530]. State- and military-linked channels have been used to disseminate propaganda and contested casualty claims, undermining trust and complicating verification of timely and accurate information [530][497].

Barriers to Information

Displacement has surged since mid-May – over 44,000 people were displaced in Magway's Pakokku and Saw townships and more than 25,000 in western Bago since late May – and the humanitarian response remains limited by access constraints and funding shortfalls, reducing community access to information and services [520]. Escalating airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes across multiple villages, further disrupting local information channels and outreach networks [520]. The IRC reported that fuel, shipping, and logistics shocks have disrupted supply chains in Myanmar, causing regular medicine shortages in Sittwe and reducing the frequency of travel to project sites, which diminishes in-person contact and community outreach [504]. Authoritarian pressure, restrictive laws, and censorship have narrowed the information space for independent media and exiled Myanmar actors, constraining reporting and media development efforts [514]. Local communities have been left unaware of hazardous activities – for example, residents reportedly were not informed about explosives stored near residential areas after the Namhkam depot blast – illustrating critical local information gaps [536]. Attacks on education and information blackouts contribute to under-reporting and hamper civilians' ability to obtain reliable information about aid, rights, and safety [515].

Misinformation and Rumors

Social media dynamics – where a small number of highly active users, coordinated accounts, and automated amplification shape commentary – drive the spread and perceived consensus of false or misleading narratives that reshape public perceptions of healthcare and response activities [497]. Harmful information in this context includes outright false claims as well as insinuations that cast doubt on the neutrality or legitimacy of health services and health workers, undermining trust in care and complicating outbreak or emergency responses [497]. Misinformation about Myanmar-related populations – notably the Rohingya – is being manufactured and amplified on social media in neighbouring countries, fuelling hate narratives, doxxing, and threats against community leaders and refugees, which civil society actors have called out and sought to counter [541][528]. Media development actors note that authoritarian pressure and suppression of independent journalism in Myanmar weaken credible local information channels, prompting increased investment in fact-checking, journalism ethics, digital safety, and targeted training for content creators to reduce misinformation risks [514]. Efforts to counter these trends combine community-level coordinated communications through trusted structures such as CITs, ISCs, and Camp Committees – emphasising coordinated messaging, mobile outreach, IEC materials, and two-way feedback – alongside fact-checking and media literacy initiatives, though gaps remain in consistency, reach, and protection of vulnerable groups [495][514][497].

Accountability Needs and Transparency

Kachin displacement rose to 244,550 as of 1 June 2026 (an increase of approximately 12,000 year-on-year), while WFP has halted assistance and domestic aid is declining, exacerbating gaps in service delivery and feedback mechanisms for displaced communities [526]. Fear of reprisals and stigmatisation discourages victims from filing complaints and reporting abuses, contributing to severe underreporting of sexual violence and other violations and limiting access to justice [516][505]. Attacks on healthcare have been widespread, with the Myanmar Armed Forces identified among the state actors most linked to such incidents, prompting calls for strengthened accountability including ICC investigations and enhanced UN reporting [497]. Opaque judicial processes, restricted press access, and shrinking civic space impede transparency and complaint mechanisms, with limited official information available on investigations or court proceedings [522][514].

Regional diplomatic moves — including Indonesia's foreign minister visiting Naypyidaw on 8 June 2026 — reflect a shift toward direct engagement with the junta that analysts warn could proceed without stronger accountability measures or meaningful participation by affected populations [531][525]. Misinformation and hate narratives targeting the Rohingya and other groups in the region, most recently and notably in Malaysia, further undermine public accountability and remedies for victims [528].

Legal and Policy

Legal and Policy Framework

International humanitarian law (IHL) requires parties to distinguish and protect medical services and civilians, binding both states and non-state actors under customary IHL; a recent review recommends the ICC prioritise investigations of attacks on healthcare and urges the UN to strengthen reporting and accountability mechanisms for such attacks [570]. International prosecutions and remedies remain active: legal actions concerning atrocity crimes against the Rohingya are being pursued before the ICC and in other jurisdictions, including Argentina and Timor-Leste, while advocates continue to reference the ICJ's 2020 provisional measures as part of the accountability framework [572]. UN reporting and human rights investigations have documented widespread use of sexual violence in the post-coup conflict, noting pervasive impunity and findings by LAW that documented acts may constitute war crimes and crimes against humanity [573]. International arms-transfer norms and UN/ATT obligations have been invoked in debates over responsibility for munitions flows and storage in Myanmar, with analysts arguing supplier states may bear legal responsibility where transfers contribute to civilian harm [579].

ASEAN's 5PC (2021) continues to serve as the region's primary political framework, calling for immediate cessation of violence, dialogue among all parties, appointment of a special envoy, humanitarian assistance, and a visit by the special envoy [574][588]. Recent diplomatic activity includes Indonesia's foreign minister visiting Naypyidaw on 8 June 2026, Thailand and Malaysia conducting visits in April–May 2026, and the Philippines designating Ma. Theresa Lazaro as ASEAN Special Envoy to Myanmar — signalling a shift toward broader, more inclusive engagement — with ASEAN foreign ministers agreeing to further contacts and planning to discuss terms of reference for a permanent special envoy at the July foreign ministers' meeting [595][574][588][592]. An investigation by Fortify Rights published on 9 June 2026 confirmed an airstrike and shootings on 5 March in Yaetwinkone village, Bago Region, that killed 28 civilians and urged UN member states to pursue accountability, stating the attack may amount to war crimes [585][594].

Humanitarian Impact of Legislation

Counterterrorism laws have been weaponised against health workers and humanitarian personnel: two doctors in Mandalay were arrested and later sentenced under counterterrorism charges, clinics were sealed and confiscated, and these cases form part of a broader pattern of health worker arrests recorded since 2016 [570]. The opacity of the justice system since the 2021 coup further limits transparency around prosecutions and detentions, increasing legal risks for humanitarian and foreign staff operating in Myanmar [586][608].

Displacement and constrained humanitarian access have intensified markedly. In Magway Region, more than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships since mid-May 2026, with over 19,100 IDPs in Myitche alone requiring urgent food and medical aid following operations from 10 May–5 June that killed nearly 40 civilians and destroyed around 1,000 homes; overcrowded camps face outbreaks of diarrhoea and critical supply shortfalls [581][577]. Intensified operations in western Bago since late May displaced over 25,000 people, with airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killing nine civilians [581]. UNHCR reported 244,550 displaced people in Kachin State as of 1 June 2026 [583][581]. Nationwide displacement has exceeded 3.7 million in the five years since the 2021 coup [583].

Humanitarian response is hampered by funding shortfalls and access constraints: WFP has halted assistance in some areas, domestic aid is declining, and donors' cuts combined with rising logistics costs have reduced delivery of medicines and forced agencies to scale back health services [583][612]. UNHCR reported approximately 415,100 returns to Myanmar in 2025, yet many returnees face insecurity, destruction, and limited access to services and documentation — raising acute needs for legal identity, property, and civil documentation to enable access to rights and services [584]. ASEAN engagement and bilateral visits to Naypyidaw in April–May 2026 are reshaping the regional approach, with implications for humanitarian access and the implementation of the 5PC as members weigh reintegration against pressure on the junta [595][588].

International Agreements Impacting the Crisis

ASEAN's 5PC remains the primary regional framework guiding engagement with Myanmar, but member states report minimal progress on its conditions and debate has intensified over whether engagement or isolation will advance peace [574][588]. Several ASEAN members resumed high-level contacts with Naypyidaw in mid-2026, prompting debate that bilateral engagement risks legitimising the junta unless tied to tangible progress on the 5PC [588][595]. The Philippines' newly designated ASEAN Special Envoy plans to meet ethnic armed organisations, signalling a shift toward broader, potentially more inclusive engagement under the 5PC framework [574].

International accountability efforts continue in parallel: the junta faces ICC investigations and legal actions in other jurisdictions, while the regime has reportedly sought to apply diplomatic pressure to halt universal-jurisdiction cases [572]. Human rights and accountability NGOs have called for stronger international measures, including political and financial support for the NUG and increased pressure on the junta for alleged attacks on civilians, reinforcing the gap between diplomatic engagement and accountability actions [585].

Humanitarian coordination under these frameworks includes UNHCR and UN agencies engaging with the Royal Thai Government and partners to transition protracted Myanmar refugee arrangements in Thailand toward development-oriented, government-linked solutions, with World Bank/IFC partnerships cited in planning for sustainable responses [571][578].

However, OCHA and regional humanitarian updates in June 2026 reported rising displacement, limited access for aid delivery, and funding shortfalls in conflict-affected areas such as Magway and western Bago, underscoring that the humanitarian elements of regional agreements remain critically underimplemented [581][584].

Limitations of Current Policies

ASEAN engagement is fragmented and risks conferring legitimacy on the junta as individual member states pursue bilateral contacts despite limited progress on the 5PC; the December 2025–January 2026 elections were widely criticised, and Min Aung Hlaing became president in April 2026, prompting debate over reintegration strategies [588][595]. Inclusion of resistance actors in dialogue remains uneven and ad hoc: while the Philippines’ ASEAN Special Envoy has signalled intent to engage ethnic armed organisations, this shift has yet to be systematically embedded in regional diplomacy [574][597][596].

Domestically, opaque justice processes, widespread detention of political opponents, and documented patterns of torture and conflict-related sexual violence undermine the rule of law, with rights investigators concluding some abuses amount to crimes against humanity [603][573]. At the international level, accountability avenues including the ICC and universal jurisdiction cases remain active, yet the junta has actively sought diplomatic pressure to resist prosecution efforts, weakening enforcement of international obligations [572].

Humanitarian access is severely constrained by ongoing military operations, airstrikes, operational bottlenecks, and funding shortfalls, and key agencies have curtailed assistance in some areas [581][583]. Repeated airstrikes and mass killings — including the 5 March attack on Yaetwinkone monastery that killed 28 civilians — exemplify the failure to protect civilians and the absence of effective domestic enforcement of IHL, prompting calls from Fortify Rights and others for international action [585][594][572]. These combined gaps — fragmented regional policy, exclusionary dialogue processes, opaque judicial mechanisms, impunity for attacks on civilians, and constrained humanitarian access — reduce policy adaptability and hinder effective protection and relief delivery in Myanmar [588][581][585][583][573].

Food Security and Livelihoods

Access to Food and Market Functionality

Intense military operations, airstrikes, and offensives have disrupted farming, supply routes, and market functioning across Magway, Myitche (Magway Region), southern Chin (Mindat), and western Bago, reducing local food availability and raising prices [668][651][680][659]. Myitche's central market was torched during operations and roughly 1,000 houses were burned across affected villages, sharply constraining local food supply [651]. In Rakhine State, supplies from mainland Myanmar have largely stopped entering key routes, contributing to rising commodity prices despite some mitigation from imports via Bangladesh and India [659]. Ongoing insecurity has disrupted cultivation and market access for rural households, reducing own production and purchasing power and worsening food affordability in conflict-affected markets [680][659][651].

Key displacement figures driving acute food access needs include:

- More than 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships since mid-May (Magway) [668].
- Over 25,000 people displaced in western Bago since late May [668].
- At least 19,100 IDPs in Myitche (Magway) urgently requiring emergency food and medical aid, with 12 displacement sites consuming roughly 40 bags of rice and about 36 viss (≈58.6 kg) of cooking oil daily [651].
- Mindat Township displacement exceeded 17,000 residents who fled to forests and neighbouring areas following repeated airstrikes [680].

Disease outbreaks (diarrhoea) have been reported in overcrowded displacement camps, compounding food and health needs [651].

Coping Mechanisms

Displacement-driven coping is acute across multiple regions. In Kachin State, UNHCR-Myanmar reported 244,550 people displaced as of 1 June 2026 (up approximately 12,000 from the prior year), and noted that over 70,000 returns through December were driven by aid suspension, poor living conditions, camp closures, and scarce jobs rather than improved security – indicating negative coping through premature returns and livelihood-related pressures [697]. Among returnees more broadly, only 60% reported having an income source, and more than four in five returnee households reported skipping at least one meal a day, reflecting severely reduced purchasing power [650]. Local responders in Myitche noted that displacement sites have reached a critical breaking point in emergency food stocks, with populations relying entirely on external assistance as supplies run low [651].

Livelihood Disruption

The IRC included Myanmar among the top 10 countries at greatest risk of new or worsening humanitarian emergencies for 2026, signalling heightened risk to livelihoods and household economic stability [638]. UNHCR reported that many returnees – including those returning to Myanmar – returned to difficult conditions marked by insecurity, widespread destruction, weak economic conditions, and limited access to services and jobs [661]. Reported natural-resource recovery, including mangrove regrowth in Myanmar, may support coastal and fisheries livelihoods, though sources do not quantify employment or income impacts [705].

Impact on Agricultural Activities and Production

Dry-season crop harvesting in Myanmar is reported as wrapping up [660]. The developing 2026–27 El Niño is forecast to increase the likelihood of below-normal rainfall in parts of Southeast Asia, raising risks of delayed planting and reduced yields during the July–September period and beyond [648][644]. Rising fuel and fertilizer prices are further constraining agricultural and fisheries activity: fuel costs have grounded many small-scale fishing boats and reduced fish supply (increasing fishmeal and poultry/aquaculture costs), while global fertilizer disruptions are driving up input costs and prompting farmers to cut fertilizer use, risking lower yields [637][638]. To strengthen resilience, World Vision reported that in 2025 tens of thousands of farmers – including in Myanmar – received training on climate-smart agriculture, integrated nutrient management, and community water-management measures such as rainwater harvesting and micro-irrigation [637].

Food and Livelihood Needs and Current Response

Humanitarian assistance in Myanmar is severely constrained by both access limitations and funding shortfalls. The World Food Programme has halted assistance in parts of the country and domestic aid is declining, leaving large numbers of displaced people without adequate food assistance [697][668]. Local responders report that emergency food stocks in displacement sites have reached a critical breaking point and that basic food supplies are urgently needed to prevent further deterioration of food security [651][668]. Civil society and rights groups are calling for cross-border humanitarian assistance to reach affected populations given limited in-country delivery capacity and shrinking aid flows [697]. The 2–8 June regional snapshot documents that access constraints and funding shortfalls are leaving large numbers of displaced people without adequate assistance [668]. Airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes across Pakokku, Saw, and western Bago, further compounding needs in areas where humanitarian reach remains limited [668].

Education

Learning Environment and Facility Conditions

Global monitoring also documents a sharp rise in attacks on education and increased use of explosive weapons that destroy schools, with Myanmar/Burma among countries affected by explosive-weapon incidents, increasing safety risks for learners and school infrastructure [718][724].

Access to Education and Barriers

Conflict-driven displacement and attacks are major barriers to school access in Myanmar. Nationwide displacement since the 2021 coup exceeds 3.7 million, with Sagaing Region alone recording over 1 million displaced, aggravating disruption to schooling and returns under precarious conditions [734]. UNHCR-Myanmar reported 244,550 people displaced in Kachin State as of 1 June 2026, an increase of about 12,000 over the past year [734]. Since mid-May 2026, more than 44,000 people were displaced in Magway's Pakokku and Saw townships and over 25,000 in western Bago following intensified operations and airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June that reportedly killed nine civilians and destroyed homes [721]. In Rakhine/Arakan, 411 armed clashes between November 2025 and April 2026 included 136 airstrikes across 12 townships that destroyed hospitals, markets, IDP camps, and homes, further degrading education infrastructure and access for Rohingya and other conflict-affected communities [751]. Global monitoring documented a surge in attacks on education in 2024–2025 (attacks on schools up 64%), identifying Myanmar among the countries with the highest numbers of students, teachers, and education personnel killed or injured in such incidents, undermining safe access to learning [724][718]. The UN has identified attacks on schools as grave violations affecting children and noted that government forces were primarily responsible for certain violations, including attacks on schools and hospitals, which has further disrupted learning and access to safe schooling [723]. Humanitarian response and education continuity are constrained by access limitations and funding shortfalls, leaving large numbers of displaced children without adequate assistance or learning continuity [721][734].

Education Needs and Current Response

Displacement across Myanmar remains high—more than 3.5 million internally displaced and over 1.5 million people have fled abroad—intensifying education needs and disruption for children and communities [723]. The World Food Programme has halted assistance in some areas, exacerbating gaps in services for displaced children [734].

Health

Availability and Access to Healthcare Services

Displacement and active hostilities have severely restricted access to healthcare across Myanmar. OCHA reported that displacement rose sharply in early June 2026, with over 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway) since mid-May and over 25,000 in western Bago since late May, as airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June killed civilians and destroyed homes, further restricting access to care [773]. In Myitche (Magway), more than 19,100 IDPs urgently need food and medical aid following junta operations beginning 10 May, with severe overcrowding, lack of clean drinking water, and diarrhoea outbreaks across 12 displacement camps requiring immediate medical response [776]. UNHCR reported approximately 244,550 people displaced in Kachin State as of 1 June 2026, with continued daily clashes and evacuation orders undermining service continuity and prompting returns driven by aid suspension and poor living conditions [785]. The IRC noted that fuel and logistics crises have disrupted medical supply chains and last-mile delivery, contributing to regular medicine shortages in Sittwe and delayed pharmaceutical deliveries [771]. OCHA and humanitarian partners highlight that access constraints and donor funding shortfalls are limiting outreach, referrals, and the frequency of in-person service delivery to displaced populations [773][771].

Disease Outbreaks

Overcrowded displacement sites and a critical lack of clean drinking water in Myitche, Magway Region have produced reported diarrhoeal outbreaks among the more than 19,100 IDPs displaced since 10 May operations [776]. The downscaling of humanitarian outreach and the transition of health services for some shelters into Ministry of Public Health district hospitals — which are absorbing increased patient loads without matching budget allocations and with incomplete insurance coverage — has reduced vaccination coverage and preventive maternal and child health services among affected populations [769]. Violence, community mistrust, and attacks on health programmes are known drivers of interrupted vaccination campaigns and resulting immunity gaps in conflict settings, increasing the risk of future outbreaks [770]. Access constraints and funding shortfalls continue to limit humanitarian health and WASH responses needed to contain outbreak risks across displacement-affected areas [773].

Health System Challenges

Myanmar's health system faces compounding structural and conflict-driven challenges. Attacks and airstrikes have damaged health infrastructure extensively, with 136 airstrikes recorded between November 2025 and April 2026 reported to have destroyed hospitals, markets, and displaced persons camps [800]. In Myitche (Magway), junta attacks from 10 May to 5 June caused nearly 40 civilian deaths, burned approximately 1,000 houses, and created overcrowded displacement sites where diarrhoea outbreaks and critical water shortages were reported [776]. Attacks on health infrastructure and personnel have repeatedly disrupted maternal health care, particularly affecting maternity wards and obstetric services [770]. Regular medicine shortages and disrupted deliveries have been reported in Sittwe, Rakhine State, where IRC noted that fuel and logistics constraints are restricting movement and the timely delivery of medicines, undermining continuity of care [771]. Humanitarian assistance has been further curtailed in some areas, with partners reporting aid reductions and suspension of WFP assistance, reducing support available to displaced communities and increasing risks of untreated illness and disease outbreaks [785]. Insecurity Insight's monitoring recorded 1,877 reported attacks on healthcare in Myanmar between January 2016 and December 2025, reflecting the sustained and systemic nature of threats to health service delivery

Mental Health and Psychosocial Support (MHPSS)

Psychosocial needs among refugees, returnees, and internally displaced persons in Myanmar are substantial, while access to mental health support remains severely limited [772]. UNHCR reported approximately 3.6 million IDPs in Myanmar at end-2025, with 532,400 people newly displaced during 2025, driving increased demand for MHPSS services [772]. In early June 2026, displacement surged further — over 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway) since mid-May and over 25,000 in western Bago since late May — with humanitarian response remaining limited by access constraints and funding shortfalls, leaving many without adequate psychosocial support [773]. Human rights and investigative reports document widespread torture, sexual violence, and severe psychological trauma among detainees and survivors in Myanmar, indicating acute MHPSS needs for survivors and former detainees [788][784]. Refugee-focused planning for Myanmar populations in Thailand identifies gaps in MHPSS and calls for expanding the availability of basic and specialized mental health and psychosocial support services as part of transition and integration measures for displaced Myanmar communities [769]. Sector guidance also stresses the importance of promoting mental health support programmes for health workers themselves, who are operating under sustained conflict conditions [770].

Health Needs and Current Response

Displacement and active hostilities have driven urgent needs for emergency trauma care, primary healthcare, WASH, and maternal-child services across multiple regions of Myanmar. In Rakhine State, intensified military airstrikes around Kyaukphyu and nearby townships in early June 2026 injured displaced civilians and caused deaths from a drone strike on 5 June, increasing demand for emergency and surgical care [794]. Kachin State displacement reached 244,550 people as of 1 June 2026 — an increase of approximately 12,000 year-on-year — while WFP has halted assistance and domestic aid is declining, exacerbating gaps in healthcare and survival services for displaced populations [785]. Humanitarian health coverage remains limited in geographic reach and scale: outreach, vaccination, maternal-child, and emergency services are constrained by access restrictions and funding shortfalls, preventing adequate coverage of many displaced and hard-to-reach communities [773]. Rights and human rights organizations have called for international action following mass civilian killings and airstrikes, but ongoing access constraints and donor shortfalls hinder the ability to scale up mobile clinics, emergency referrals, and sustained primary and maternal health service delivery [802][773].

Nutrition

Availability and Access to Nutrition Services

Humanitarian nutrition services in Myanmar are severely constrained by rising displacement, access restrictions, and funding shortfalls, leaving many displaced people without adequate assistance [836][839]. Nationwide displacement since the 2021 coup exceeds 3.7 million, with Sagaing Region alone surpassing 1 million displaced [839]. Key displacement figures driving acute nutrition needs include:

- More than 44,000 people displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway) since mid-May 2026 [836].
- Over 25,000 people displaced in western Bago Region since late May 2026, with airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killing nine civilians and destroying homes [836].
- Over 19,100 IDPs in Myitche (Magway) urgently requiring emergency food and medical aid after attacks beginning 10 May, across 12 displacement sites, with daily consumption needs of 40 bags of rice and 36 viss (~58.6 kg) of cooking oil, and diarrhoea outbreaks in overcrowded camps [837].
- More than 17,000 residents from Mindat township and surrounding villages who have fled amid intensified operations in southern Chin State, facing rising living costs, food shortages, and disrupted farming and market access [872].

The World Food Programme has halted assistance in some areas and domestic aid is declining, further diminishing capacity to deliver supplementary and therapeutic feeding services [839]. Overcrowding and critical shortages of clean water in displacement sites have led to diarrhoeal outbreaks, increasing immediate need for medical and nutrition interventions [837]. Attacks on health care—including frequent incidents affecting maternity services in Myanmar—have undermined the delivery of maternal, infant, and child health and nutrition services, constraining access to facility-based malnutrition treatment and maternal nutrition support [838].

Nutrition Needs and Current Response

Displacement-driven food and health needs in Myanmar are acute as of June 2026, while humanitarian access constraints and funding shortfalls continue to limit the response [836][839][837]. Attacks on health care and broader disruptions to health systems and supply chains have undermined the delivery of nutrition and medical services across the country [838][837][839]. El Niño-related irregular rainfall and dry-season crop impacts are adding further risk to local food availability and household diets [831][841].

Operational gaps identified in reporting include severely limited humanitarian coverage due to access constraints and funding shortfalls, urgent needs for emergency food distributions, immediate medical and WASH support to address diarrhoeal outbreaks, and the need for restoration of humanitarian supply routes and resumed large-scale food assistance [836][839][837].

WASH

Availability of Water Sources

Displacement continues to rise across Myanmar: more than 44,000 people have been displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway Region) since mid-May 2026, and intensified operations in western Bago Region since late May 2026 have displaced over 25,000 people [879]. In Myitche (Magway), over 19,100 IDPs across 12 displacement sites face severe overcrowding and critical shortages of clean drinking water, with diarrhoea outbreaks reported as the displacement entered its fourth week following a 10 May 2026 raid [902]. Humanitarian response and WASH assistance remain limited by access constraints and funding shortfalls, leaving large numbers of displaced people without adequate assistance [879]. Operational constraints—including rising fuel, shipping and logistics costs and supplier delivery failures—have reduced aid delivery capacity to hard-to-reach areas, further constraining WASH service delivery [895]. Among Myanmar-origin refugees in Thai shelters, community-managed water systems are increasingly fragile in 2026 due to ageing infrastructure, high maintenance costs and a shift of financial responsibility onto refugee households, although partners continue to support WASH committees and sustain water and waste services in key shelters through 2026 with a planned handover in March 2027 [878][883].

Access to Sanitation Facilities and Hygiene Practices

Partners supporting these systems include COERR, IRC, MI, MoI and UNHCR, who work with refugee-led WASH committees to sustain services [878]. In Magway Region, the 12 overcrowded displacement sites in Myitche—hosting over 19,100 IDPs—face severe overcrowding and critical shortages of clean drinking water, with diarrhoea outbreaks creating urgent WASH and public-health needs [902].

Waste Management and Vector-Borne Disease Risks

Rising logistics and fuel costs and supply-chain disruptions have caused regular shortages of medicines in Sittwe, Rakhine State, and reduced the frequency of travel to project sites, undermining last-mile delivery for health and WASH programmes in Myanmar [895]. Following the 28 March 2025 earthquake, IRC deployed mobile medical teams providing health, water and sanitation programming in Mandalay Region, demonstrating ongoing WASH response capacity but highlighting reliance on external operational support [895].

Main WASH Needs and Humanitarian Response

Shelter and Non-Food Items (NFI)

Damage to Housing and Shelter Needs

Displacement and housing destruction have reached severe levels across multiple regions of Myanmar. In Myitche (Magway), over 19,100 people have been displaced across 12 severely overcrowded displacement sites following attacks that began on 10 May, with roughly 1,000 houses burned across 18 villages and nearly 40 civilians killed between 10 May and 5 June [934]. More than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway) since mid-May 2026, while over 25,000 were displaced in western Bago Region following intensified operations since late May 2026, with airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June killing nine civilians and destroying homes across multiple villages [936]. In Mindat (southern Chin State), over 17,000 residents fled into forests and improvised bunkers after repeated airstrikes, creating acute shelter needs [946]. Kachin State recorded 244,550 internally displaced people as of 1 June 2026, and airstrikes on 4 June struck a hospital in Si Thar and damaged multiple IDP camps in Karenni State, killing at least three and damaging shelter infrastructure [937][947]. A massive explosives-depot blast in Namhkam Township (Shan State) on 31 May left over 600 people homeless and more than 60 killed, with major reconstruction challenges remaining [950].

Shelter availability and conditions have deteriorated broadly: displacement sites are overcrowded, basic services including clean water and health care are strained, and humanitarian response is limited by access constraints and funding shortfalls [934][936]. Elderly people and persons with disabilities have been among those affected, including victims who had sheltered in monasteries during village raids [972]. Forced evictions and land-clearance orders around Pyin Oo Lwin (Yadanabon project) have resulted in the rapid removal of homes and over 30 shops without clear alternatives, creating tenure insecurity that will impede return and reconstruction [945]. Community infrastructure damage further undermines local shelter and recovery capacity, including the systematic torching of Myitche central market, destruction of a monastery in Bago, and damage to hospitals and IDP camp structures in Kachin and Karenni [934][971][947]. Priority areas for shelter intervention include Myitche and wider Magway (Pakokku, Saw), western Bago, Mindat (Chin State), Kachin (Si Thar/Shwegu), and Namhkam (Shan State), where urgent shelter assistance, upgrades to displacement sites, and solutions addressing land tenure and explosive-hazard risks are required [934][936][946][937][950][947].

Living Conditions in Camps or Settlements

Displacement sites across Myanmar are severely overcrowded with limited access to clean water, sanitation, and basic health services, while facing acute protection threats including civilian killings and systematic destruction of homes and camps [934][936][948]. In Myitche (Magway), the 12 displacement sites hosting over 19,100 IDPs are reporting critical shortages of clean drinking water and diarrhoea outbreaks [934]. In Kachin State, UNHCR-Myanmar reported 244,550 people displaced as of 1 June 2026, with ongoing daily clashes and evacuation notices, including a notification for Shwegu township to evacuate on 8 June 2026 [937]. In Mindat (southern Chin State), thousands of residents have been sheltering in improvised bunkers and forest areas following repeated airstrikes, with extremely limited access to services [946].

Humanitarian response across all sites is constrained by access restrictions and funding shortfalls, leaving many locations without adequate food, WASH, and medical assistance and increasing disease and protection risks [936][934]. The World Food Programme has halted assistance in some areas, and domestic aid is declining, further eroding support available to displaced populations [937].

Women, children, persons with disabilities, and the elderly face heightened vulnerabilities in these settings, compounded by overcrowding, limited privacy, and exposure to harsh conditions [934][972].

NFI and Shelter Needs and Current Response

The scale of displacement across Myanmar has generated acute and largely unmet NFI needs. In Myitche and wider Magway (Pakokku and Saw townships), populations displaced since mid-May 2026 require emergency food, medical aid, and basic household supplies including blankets, cooking utensils, and other essential items, with current response falling well short of needs due to access constraints and funding shortfalls [934][936]. The 31 May explosives-depot blast in Namhkam (Shan State), which killed dozens, injured hundreds, and left over 600 people homeless, has created additional immediate shelter, NFI, and reconstruction needs for affected households [950].

Humanitarian actors face significant operational and logistical challenges, including access constraints, funding shortfalls, and supply-chain disruptions that have delayed medical and NFI deliveries and constrained the distribution of medicines and essential items across Myanmar [936][938]. In Kachin State, the combination of rising displacement — reaching 244,550 people as of 1 June 2026 — with the World Food Programme halting assistance and declining domestic aid has further eroded the availability of shelter and NFI support [937]. Local and national civil society actors have called for expanded cross-border and international assistance to fill these gaps, highlighting coordination and funding shortfalls as the key barriers to scaling up shelter and NFI responses [937].

Protection

Impact on civilians

Displacement continued to rise sharply across Myanmar amid intensified military operations and airstrikes in mid-2026. More than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships (Magway Region) since mid-May, and over 25,000 were displaced in western Bago Region since late May, with airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reportedly killing nine civilians and destroying homes [992]. In Myitche town (Magway), following a 10 May raid, some 19,100 IDPs were sheltering across 12 displacement sites by early June, with nearly 40 civilians killed between 10 May and 5 June, approximately 1,000 houses torched, and critical food shortages, overcrowding, and diarrhoeal outbreaks reported [988]. In Mindat Township (southern Chin State), more than 17,000 residents fled into forests and neighbouring areas as repeated airstrikes and village burnings forced people into bunkers and disrupted farming and market access [1019]. UNHCR-Myanmar's 1 June update recorded 244,550 displaced people in Kachin State, with daily clashes in Waingmaw, Bhamo, and Hpakan, and authorities notifying residents of Shwegu Township to evacuate on 8 June [986]. Nationwide displacement since the 2021 coup exceeds 3.7 million people, with Sagaing reporting over 1 million displaced [986].

Attacks on civilian infrastructure have caused significant harm. On 4 June, junta airstrikes hit a hospital in Si Thar (Shwegu Township, Kachin State) and IDP camps in Demoso (Karenni State), killing at least three civilians, injuring five, and damaging hospital infrastructure after four bombs were dropped on the compound [982]. On 9 June, Fortify Rights confirmed a mass killing in Yaetwinkone Village, Ledo Township (Bago Region), where an airstrike and subsequent ground assault on 5 March killed 28 civilians — including children and a pregnant woman — at a monastery, implicating Light Infantry Division 77 units (LIB 20, LIB 439, and IB 264) in violations of international humanitarian law [1013]. A massive explosives-depot blast in Namhkam Township (northern Shan State) on 31 May killed dozens and injured many; local rescue teams reported more than 60 killed, over 100 injured, and some 600 people left homeless, while the TNLA reported 43 killed and 112 injured [1026]. Separate strikes around Kyaukphyu/Taung Maw Oo and Ramree in early June injured civilians as fighting centred on the Taung Maw Oo naval base [1010]. Humanitarian response remains constrained by access restrictions and funding shortfalls, leaving many displaced populations without adequate assistance or services [992][988].

Factors Driving protection risks

Since mid-May and into early June 2026, intensified military operations, airstrikes, and targeted attacks by the junta and other armed actors have driven large-scale displacement, civilian deaths, and destruction of homes and markets [992][1010][1013][988]. Attacks on civilian infrastructure and health services — including hospital destruction and arrests of health workers — have increased protection risks and prompted calls for accountability [1013][1024][983]. The growing use of explosive weapons, drone strikes, and widespread unexploded ordnance and ERW has caused civilian casualties, hampered access to farmland and services, and increased long-term contamination risks [1020][983][1026].

Arbitrary arrests, enforced disappearances, torture, and documented sexual violence in detention — including systemic abuse of female political prisoners — remain widespread, with thousands held as political detainees since the coup [991]. Denial of legal protection and statelessness (notably of the Rohingya), reports of unlawful conscription, and attempts to exploit cleared lands for commercial projects further compound protection vulnerabilities for minority and displaced populations [989][984]. Economic deprivation driven by blockades, disrupted supply routes, and livelihood loss — notably in Rakhine and conflict-affected agricultural areas — is forcing risky livelihood behaviours and increasing vulnerability to exploitation and trafficking [994][988]. Humanitarian access constraints and funding shortfalls have limited assistance at scale, weakening protection services and response capacity in affected areas [992][1006].

Psychological and mental health impacts

The sustained cycle of displacement, aerial bombardment, mass killings, and detention across Myanmar has generated substantial psychosocial needs among affected populations. Large-scale displacement in Magway, western Bago, and Chin State, combined with repeated residential strikes and reported killings, has added to civilian distress since mid-May 2026 [992][1019]. Fortify Rights' confirmed investigation into the 5 March 2026 airstrike and ground assault on Yaetwinkone village documented detentions, shootings, and survivor accounts of severe physical and psychological harm among those who witnessed or survived the attack, which killed 28 civilians [1013][1024].

Reporting by the Assistance Association for Political Prisoners (AAPP) and Fortify Rights documents systematic torture, sexual abuse, invasive strip-searches, and widespread psychological trauma among female political prisoners, noting more than 6,400 women among thousands of political detainees and reporting that around 40 female political prisoners have reportedly died in detention as a result of torture and medical neglect [991]. Attacks on civilian sites including schools, mass killings, and large-scale displacement are driving substantial psychosocial needs — particularly among children, displaced populations, and survivors of detention — while constrained humanitarian access is disrupting the availability of mental health and psychosocial support services in affected areas [997][992].

Protection Needs and Current Response

Protection needs have escalated sharply across Myanmar amid ongoing military operations and airstrikes, while humanitarian access constraints and funding shortfalls continue to severely limit the scale and reach of the response [992]. Large numbers of newly displaced people — including over 44,000 in Magway and 25,000 in western Bago — remain without adequate assistance, exposing civilians to serious protection risks amid continued hostilities [992]. Kachin State alone recorded 244,550 displaced persons as of 1 June 2026, an increase of approximately 12,000 year-on-year, with authorities issuing evacuation notices for Shwegu Township on 8 June [986].

Fortify Rights called for international action and accountability following the confirmed mass killing in Yaetwinkone Village on 5 March 2026 and identified the junta units responsible [1013]. Protection actors face acute gaps in monitoring, case management, and referral systems, particularly for survivors of detention-based abuse, GBV, and child protection violations. The UN has warned that recent funding cuts have reduced its capacity to provide care to survivors of conflict-related sexual violence [980]. Across conflict-affected areas, urgent needs include legal assistance, safe spaces, community-based protection mechanisms, and specialized support for at-risk individuals, including women, children, and political detainees.

Child Protection concerns

Children are among the most vulnerable populations affected by the ongoing crisis in Myanmar. The confirmed mass killing in Yaetwinkone Village on 5 March 2026 included children among the 28 civilians killed when an airstrike and gunfire struck a monastery [1013]. Separate strikes around Kyaukphyu/Taung Maw Oo and Ramree in early June injured civilians including a child as fighting centred on the Taung Maw Oo naval base [992][1010]. Nationwide displacement exceeding 3.7 million since the 2021 coup — with Sagaing alone reporting over 1 million displaced and Kachin among the worst-affected states — exacerbates protection risks for children in displacement settings, including risks of family separation, recruitment by armed groups, child labour, neglect, and exploitation [986].

Attacks on schools and civilian sites, mass killings, and large-scale displacement across Magway, western Bago, Chin State, and Kachin State are generating acute child protection needs [997]. Humanitarian access constraints and funding shortfalls leave many displaced children without adequate protection services, sustained aid, or access to education and essential services in affected areas [992][986].

Violence against women and girls

Reports document systemic sexual violence by Myanmar security forces and in detention — including invasive strip-searches, sexual humiliation, threats of rape, and other forms of torture — with survivors and former detainees describing a patterned use of sexual violence as a tool of intimidation, based on interviews and investigations conducted since late 2025 [991]. The Assistance Association for Political Prisoners (AAPP) and Fortify Rights report more than 6,400 women among thousands of political detainees, with around 40 female political prisoners reportedly having died in detention due to torture and medical neglect [991]. Conflict-related sexual violence disproportionately impacts Rohingya women and children, with over 900 documented cases attributed to the junta from February 2021 to May 2025 [989]. The UN has named Myanmar among contexts of particular concern for conflict-related sexual violence and has warned that recent funding cuts have reduced its capacity to provide care to survivors [980].

Attacks on health care and maternal services have been frequently reported in Myanmar, with maternity, obstetrics, and midwifery services repeatedly affected, undermining survivors' access to medical, reproductive, and GBV-related care [983]. Survivors face major barriers to reporting and accessing justice, including lack of legal aid, long distances to competent authorities, security risks, fear of reprisals, and stigma [980]. Ongoing displacement and continued hostilities further exacerbate vulnerabilities to gender-based violence among affected civilian populations [992].

Vulnerable Groups / Special Needs Groups

Unaccompanied and Separated Children

A significant number of unaccompanied and separated children from Myanmar remain unregistered, restricting access to services and increasing exposure to harm such as unsafe care arrangements and child labour [1055]. Child protection interventions are being scaled up—including strengthened case management, improved data systems, para-social workforce support, interpreters and caregiver networks—yet persistent gaps in registration, referral pathways, psychosocial support and legal assistance continue to hinder family tracing and reunification [1055]. UN reporting on children in armed conflict documented a 25% increase in grave violations between 2023 and 2024, with recruitment and use of minors, killings and abductions among the most frequent violations and sexual violence against minors rising by 35%, indicating heightened risks to separated children in conflict-affected settings including Myanmar [1056][1096]. Investigations by rights groups document junta attacks and operations that have killed and detained children, with Rohingya and other children facing sexual violence and unlawful conscription, increasing risks of recruitment, trafficking and exploitation [1076][1065].

Rising displacement across Myanmar—including large displacements in Magway and Bago Regions in mid-2026—combined with attacks on education and the military use of schools, further amplify risks of child recruitment and exploitation in affected areas [1061][1077]. Overall, elevated protection risks for unaccompanied and separated children persist amid limited registration and family-tracing coverage, strained case-management and psychosocial services, and funding constraints [1055][1061][1086].

Pregnant and Lactating Women

Conflict-related violence has directly and repeatedly undermined maternal and reproductive healthcare in Myanmar. On 5 March 2026, an airstrike and ground assault on Yaetwinkone (Bago Region) killed 28 civilians, including a pregnant woman, and destroyed a monastery sheltering civilians [1076][1089]. On 4 June 2026, military airstrikes struck a rural hospital in Si Thar (Shwegu Township, Kachin State) and multiple IDP camps in western Demoso (Karenni State), killing at least three civilians, injuring others, and damaging hospital buildings and dispensaries, further undermining local access to reproductive and maternal care [1063]. Insecurity Insight monitoring shows Myanmar has sustained high levels of violence affecting maternal health services, with 53 post-2022 incidents recorded involving the repeated targeting or disruption of maternity wards, obstetrics services and midwives [1103]. Humanitarian access constraints, checkpoints, curfews and funding shortfalls are limiting women's ability to reach timely prenatal, delivery and emergency obstetric care, with some women and clinicians reporting that deliveries—including C-sections—are being scheduled to avoid travelling during active bombardment [1061][1103]. Surging displacement has compounded these pressures: more than 19,100 IDPs in Myitche (Magway) since 10 May face critical shortages of food and clean water and outbreaks of diarrhoea, creating urgent need for medical assistance including maternal care [1060]. Conflict-related sexual and gender-based violence remains widespread, with UN and civil society reporting documenting sexual violence by state and non-state actors and severe abuses of women in detention that undermine survivors' access to specialised protection and health services [1056][1075][1080]. Rohingya women and children have been disproportionately affected, with over 900 documented cases of conflict-related sexual violence attributed to junta forces from February 2021 to May 2025, further compounding protection and maternal health needs among displaced populations [1065].

Adolescents and Youth

Displacement and ongoing hostilities have sharply disrupted young people's lives and access to education. Attacks on education and the military use of schools have risen, contributing to school disruption, increased risk of child recruitment and gender-based violence in affected areas; Myanmar is among the contexts with the highest numbers of education-related casualties and incidents documented in recent global monitoring [1077]. Rohingya individuals have been subjected to unlawful conscription by both the Myanmar junta and the Arakan Army, creating direct recruitment and protection risks for youth from that community [1065]. Humanitarian response and services for young people—including psychosocial support—remain constrained by access limitations and funding shortfalls, leaving many displaced children and adolescents without adequate assistance [1061]. Global monitoring notes that over two-fifths of refugees and IDP returnees report stress-related symptoms, underscoring likely unmet mental health needs among displaced youth from Myanmar [1067]. Civil society and youth networks in the region are active in advocacy and protection campaigns, with youth forums among endorsers calling for rights and accountability for affected communities including the Rohingya [1065].

People with Disabilities

The UN Secretary-General has warned of the extraordinary difficulties facing people with disabilities in armed conflict contexts, including Myanmar [1056]. Myanmar is among countries with exceptionally high levels of attacks on health care, undermining availability and access to essential health services for vulnerable groups including those with disabilities [1103]. Local reports from recent junta raids near Bagan documented that many victims were elderly or disabled, underscoring acute protection risks for people with disabilities in conflict-affected areas [1108]. In Rakhine State (Sittwe), humanitarian actors have reported regular shortages and delivery delays of medicines, constraining access to health care for people reliant on humanitarian assistance [1086].

Elderly

Older people face worsening access to healthcare and medicines as health facilities are attacked, logistics and supply chains are disrupted, and humanitarian access and funding shrink [1103][1086][1061]. In Mindat Township (Chin State), intensified operations and airstrikes have driven more than 17,000 residents to flee by June 2026; local records show 766 deaths between 2021 and end-2024, most linked to medicine shortages and untreated chronic illnesses, underscoring older people's elevated risk from healthcare disruption [1068]. Reporting from villages raided near Bagan noted that many of the dozens of victims were elderly or disabled, highlighting direct exposure of older people to violence and exclusion from protection during operations [1108]. In Magway (Myitche), junta raids since 10 May caused mass displacement, leaving over 19,100 IDPs in overcrowded camps and facing diarrhoeal outbreaks and critical shortages of food and medical aid—conditions that disproportionately affect older adults [1060][1061]. Airstrikes on 4 June struck a hospital in Si Thar (Kachin State) and IDP camps in Karenni State, killing at least three civilians and damaging health infrastructure that older patients depend on for treatment and referrals [1063]. Rising logistics and fuel costs have disrupted medicine deliveries and reduced outreach to remote areas, further constraining mobility support, referrals and access to medications for older patients across affected areas [1086].

Displaced

Displacement across Myanmar continues to rise, with more than 3.7 million people displaced nationwide since the 2021 coup [1058]. Kachin State had 244,550 people displaced as of 1 June 2026—an increase of about 12,000 over the previous year—with daily clashes reported on 9 June 2026 [1058]. In Magway Region, more than 44,000 people were displaced in Pakokku and Saw townships since mid-May 2026, and over 25,000 were displaced in western Bago Region since late May 2026, with airstrikes between 27 May and 2 June reported to have killed nine civilians and destroyed homes across multiple villages [1061].

Operations beginning 10 May in Myitche (Magway) led to over 19,100 IDPs, nearly 40 civilians killed and approximately 1,000 homes burned or destroyed; displaced people occupy 12 overcrowded sites facing critical shortages of food and clean water and outbreaks of diarrhoea as of early June 2026 [1060]. Approximately 225,200 stateless Rohingya are internally displaced within Myanmar, with sizable Rohingya populations also in Bangladesh, Malaysia and India [1067]. Returns to Myanmar in 2025 were numerically significant but often occurred under pressure and into insecure, resource-depleted areas, raising concerns about the safety, sustainability and livelihood prospects of returnees [1105]. Humanitarian response is constrained by access restrictions and funding shortfalls, with the World Food Programme having halted assistance in parts of Kachin and domestic aid declining [1058][1061]. Attacks on health care have been extensively documented in Myanmar, with 1,877 incidents recorded in the 2016–2025 monitoring period, undermining displaced populations' access to medical services [1103]. Protection risks for displaced communities include widespread conflict-related sexual violence against Rohingya women and children and the arrest or criminalization of health workers, exacerbating protection and access gaps in displacement settings [1065][1103].

Minorities

Civil society actors have documented systemic discrimination and targeted violence against Rohingya communities, including large-scale village destruction, numerous airstrikes, and conflict-related sexual violence (over 900 documented cases from February 2021 to May 2025), while warning of junta attempts to undermine international accountability and pressure states pursuing universal-jurisdiction cases and ICC processes [1065]. Approximately 225,200 stateless Rohingya are internally displaced within Myanmar, forming part of a broader stateless population challenge totalling hundreds of thousands in the country [1067]. Intensified operations in southern Chin State have forced more than 17,000 residents from Mindat and surrounding villages into flight, with repeated airstrikes and damage to civilian infrastructure and health services reported [1068]. A high share of recorded attacks on health care has been linked to the Myanmar Armed Forces since 2021, and education has experienced among the highest casualty figures globally from attacks on schools and personnel, exacerbating exclusion and protection gaps for minority communities [1103][1077]. ASEAN-level engagement has begun to widen beyond junta-centric channels, with the Philippines' special envoy and other member-state envoys planning consultations with ethnic armed organizations to support more inclusive dialogue under the Five-Point Consensus [1085][1066][1094].
